Civic Awards winners Nicolette Nixon, Tina Clark and Gulizar Yaldiz with the Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville

COMMUNITY SPIRIT

THREE inspirational women were winners of this year's Mayor of Hackney's Civic Awards. Nicolette Nixon, Tina Clark and Gulizar Yaldiz were all recognised for their individual contributions to creating community cohesion in the borough.

Now in its fourth year, the Civic Awards aim to shine a light on the remarkable achievements people in Hackney are doing to help make the borough a better place to live, work or study. Over 30 nominations were received this year, with tough competition to reach the final three winners.

Nicolette Nixon is a Tenant and Resident Association (TRA) Chair, and founder of the Gascoyne and Morningside youth club.

She first became an active member of her community when she joined her TRA in 1995.

She was galvanised into action when she read a description of where she lived as an 'estate of underachievers'. Nicolette helped set up a youth club and community centre in 1999 and pioneered a market stall business with young people, which won a national award last year.

Nicolette said: "When I was growing up on the estate there was nowhere for us to go and nothing to do. When I grew up and saw young people still hanging around getting shouted at for playing, I knew something had to be done. I saw a disused hall and set about opening the youth club. I walked up to young people to ask them if they would come and it's still going strong 20 years on."

Tina Clark is a facilities assistant on the Pembury Estate and goes above and beyond her day job in her care for residents. She makes sure older residents are okay, knocking on doors to check people have food and heating during the winter months and making sure repairs have been carried out.

Tina said: "I think it's important to show compassion and not just walk on by. Even if it's just to stop for a chat or to say hello, you should ask people if they are alright and see if you can help in some way – even if it's just to listen to people. Sharing a connection is always something nice you can do for other people."

Gulizar Yaldiz has worked for the last 11 years supporting Kurdish and Turkish communities in Hackney. She is a well-known community stalwart who is always on-hand to help people, either for a quick chat about issues they may be having or helping them connect to local services.

Recently, Gulizar worked with women who were suffering with mental health issues and isolation to set up a cookery class, which helped people get together, have fun and talk over food. She also set up a lunch club for older people and works with families to get them connected to school services for any support they might need.

She said: "Volunteering is a great opportunity to understand yourself and the community around you. You can see the problems people are having and see how you can help them overcome these."

The Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, who handed out the awards at the Town Hall on 22 May, said: "It's great to be celebrating Hackney's community spirit and giving thanks to these three incredible women who are all active in standing up for their communities."

#BetterRenting

The Tenant Fees Act means letting agents can no longer charge fees to let homes to renters, saving prospective tenants hundreds of pounds

PRIVATE tenants looking for a new home to rent in Hackney are being reminded to keep their money in their pockets and report illegal activity as the Council begins tough enforcement of the ban on letting fees and cap on tenancy deposits.

The Tenant Fees Act, which comes into force on 1 June, means letting agents can no longer charge fees to let homes to renters – saving prospective tenants hundreds of pounds.

The Council launched its own voluntary ban on these type of fees in 2017, after pushing the Government to introduce measures to prevent unfair and untransparent charges for renting a home, while the cost of renting in Hackney rocketed in recent years.

“Our message... is clear – we'll use every power we have at our disposal to tackle those who flout the law”

Research by the Council's #BetterRenting campaign found that tenants in Hackney were regularly being charged fees of more than £500 to begin a tenancy which, when added to a six-week deposit, could see up-front payments on an average two-bedroom home near £3,000.

With a legal ban now in place across England, landlords, letting agents and managing agents will face fines of up to £30,000 and banning orders if they charge fees for services such as processing tenancy agreements or request deposit payments above five weeks' rent.

Cllr Sem Moema, Mayoral Adviser for Private Renting and Housing Affordability, said: “The cost of renting in Hackney is already far too high without landlords and agents taking advantage of Hackney's acute housing shortage by charging tenants excessive, untransparent and unreasonable fees just to find somewhere to live.

“We campaigned strongly for an end to letting fees, and with a ban now in place our message to landlords and letting agents is clear – we'll use every power we have at our disposal to tackle those who flout the law. And we want renters to help us stop rogue landlords and agents getting around the new rules by telling us when they're asked to make unfair payments and refusing to pay charges that they shouldn't.”

GYPSY, Roma and Traveller History Month (GRTHM) is being celebrated in Hackney next month with events exploring the culture of the largest ethnic minority community in Europe.

From 1 June, GRTHM will help raise awareness of the Gypsy, Roma and Traveller communities. There are an estimated 300,000 Gypsies, Roma and Travellers in Britain with a community of around 800 in Hackney, including 400 children.

To help explore the history of one of Hackney's oldest communities the Council is working with Yagori Dance School to host a workshop and performance as part of the Dalston Children's Festival on 1 June.

Dancers with twirling colourful skirts, live musicians and traditional singers are set to entertain the crowds.

Saeeda Kasym, Romany Gypsy Performer and Teacher at Yagori Dance School, said: "GRTHM gives us the chance to come together and celebrate our wonderful community, bringing people together and introducing them to something new."

"I would encourage everyone to come along on 1 June to have fun and explore Romany dance and music."

Despite having a history in London spanning the last 500 years, most people know little of the rich culture of the Gypsy, Roma and Traveller communities. Experts believe that ignorance may lead to misunderstanding and discrimination with nine out of 10 UK Gypsy, Traveller or Roma children reporting incidences of racial abuse.

Alongside the performance extravaganza in Dalston Square on 1 June, which will take place from 1pm to 2pm, Hackney's libraries will be hosting a colouring competition around the theme of dance and music, with prizes available.

Stoke Newington Literary Festival returns to Hackney from 7 to 9 June

SINCE its creation in 2010, the Stoke Newington Literary Festival has gone from little and local to world-class. This year is its 10th and, true to form, it looks set to be the best yet.

From 7 to 9 June, you can catch Hackney-born Zawe Ashton on her new book 'Character'

'Breakdown'. If you're a foodie, check out Nigella Lawson's chat to local food writer Debora Robertson.

Music has always been an important component of the festival, and this year's line-up includes New Order's Stephen Morris and Billy Bragg, while there's a programme of free live music running across the whole weekend at the Budvar Tent outside Stoke Newington Town Hall.

Elsewhere you'll find Lauren Laverne (pictured) on the politics of fashion, Miriam Khan on modern Muslim women, former Labour leader Ed Miliband calling for a 'war footing' on climate change and Elmer the Elephant showing up for the kids.

With so much star-studded action, you'd forgive the festival for forgetting its roots, but it hasn't. It was founded to raise money for literacy initiatives in the borough and continues to work with schools, the library service, community arts organisations and refugee groups to promote reading for the whole community. So book your bookish event now.

Old Street roundabout set to change to two-way traffic

RESIDENTS are being advised to plan ahead as construction work to remove the Old Street roundabout begins. From 27 May, two-way traffic will begin at Old Street and the south-eastern section of the junction will be temporarily closed to vehicles.

The right-turn from Old Street west into City Road south will be permanently banned. Increases in journey time are expected after the switch-over and Transport for London (TfL) is advising people to take extra care in the area as traffic gets used to the new two-way system.

Buses will run on their normal line of route in the new two-way layout and TfL is encouraging drivers to consider walking or cycling for local journeys.

In due course, fully segregated cycle lanes will run along all arms of the new junction. The transformation of the roundabout is set to be complete by the end of 2020.

Homes win architects award

NEW homes on the Colville Estate in Shoreditch have been named some of the best new buildings in London by the Royal Institute of British Architects (RIBA).

The latest phase of the project, built by the Council as part of its regeneration programme, saw 116 homes completed – with 70 for genuinely affordable social rent. The development – along with another phase built by the Council's partner Anthology – picked up an award at the RIBA London Awards on 20 May. Another 580 homes will be built on the estate over the next decade – with every existing secure Council tenant guaranteed the right to move into a new, modern, high-quality home.

A RECORD breaking 60,000 people took part in the largest-ever Hackney Festival of Fitness.

The three-day festival, organised by Virgin Sport, took place from 17 to 19 May and included the most popular Hackney Half Marathon to date. Over 17,000 people ran the 13.1 mile route, making it London's biggest half marathon.

All the runners who took part in the Hackney Half and Hackney 5K were also part of a landmark event. Virgin Sport and the Council committed to eliminating single-use plastic bottles from the race course, becoming the largest race in the UK to do so.

Nearly 200,000 plastic water bottles were eliminated from the six water aid stations on the route and replaced with 259,000 paper cups (100 per cent recyclable). Additionally, recyclable cartons were provided for the finish line, to eliminate an additional 35,000 water bottles.

Cllr Jon Burke, Cabinet Member for Energy, Waste, Transport and Public Realm, said: "I'm delighted that Hackney is now home to the largest UK running event to exclude single-use plastics bottles."

The half marathon was won by Jonathan Cornish and Emily Stewart, with times of 1:06:58 and 1:19.45 respectively.

Jonathan said: "I love the buzz of the Hackney Half Marathon. Great energy, support, and cheering the whole way."

Emily added: "It's the first race I've run with spectators, which really spurs you on. It was great fun."

Meanwhile, 72 fitness activities took place on Hackney Marshes and over 1,000 young runners took part in the Hackney Schools

Challenge, each covering 12.1 miles in the weeks leading up to race day, then running the final mile together.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: "It's been an inspiration to see so many people out running on Hackney's streets.

"I loved each time I ran in the half marathon and I met lots of people who told me they've taken up running as a result of seeing it every year."

More than 60,000 people took part in this year's Festival of Fitness

Hackney programme for SMEs wins business friendly award

THE Council has won the 'Best Programme of Support for Small Businesses' award in The London Small Business Friendly Borough Awards for its work supporting small businesses, startups and entrepreneurs.

The Hackney Business Network was developed to support the 99 per cent of Hackney businesses that are classed as small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs).

The Network includes business forums and other free events, a regular newsletter and an online business portal that provides access to local business news, events, a commercial premises search and signposting to free business advice and support.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Business, Planning and Investment, said: "It was a real privilege to receive on behalf of the Council the award for the 'Best Programme of Support for Small Businesses'. The award, given by the Federation of Small Businesses and London Councils, recognises the Council's work supporting our borough's small businesses who are the very foundation of our local economy, creating great town centres and providing quality goods and services to Hackney's communities and beyond.

"The award recognises the impressive work achieved so far, but over the coming months, the network will be expanding, making it easier for those running businesses to talk to and work with the Council; from accessing Council services and connecting with Council contracts, to accessing finance, markets and advice to grow your business."

Businesses interested in accessing support through the Hackney Business Network can email: business@hackney.gov.uk; or visit: www.investinhackney.org

Cllr Clare Potter sings praises of her time as Speaker of Hackney

THE Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Clare Potter, hung up her ceremonial chain this month as her year-long role came to an end.

The Speaker fulfils public duties on behalf of the Council, as well as raising funds for their chosen charities.

In her capacity as Speaker, Cllr Potter has attended almost 300 events and raised almost £20,000 for her chosen charities – Shoreditch Trust's Blue Marble Training Project, You Make It and Hackney Quest's Father 2 Father mentoring programme.

Cllr Potter also led close to 500 adults and 200 children on guided tours around the Town Hall.

Aiding Cllr Potter with her duties throughout the year was her friend and Speakers' Consort for the year, Lee Laudat-Scott.

Cllr Potter said: "I am immensely honoured to have served Hackney this last year as the Speaker.

"In this role you are able to meet people from different communities across Hackney and this gives you a great insight into how diverse, vibrant and exciting our borough truly is.

"From presiding over citizenship ceremonies, raising the Black History Month and LGBTQI+ flags from the Town Hall roof, holding a Silver Sunday event, taking part in the London New Year's Day parade to celebrate the contribution of the Windrush generation, to marking Holocaust Memorial Day, and Remembrance Sunday, I have met the most amazing people and made lifelong friends along the way."

She added: "It has been a true pleasure and I will treasure my time as Hackney Speaker forever."

Her deputy, Cllr Kam Adams, has now taken over as the new Speaker of Hackney.

Cycling Club Hackney aims to promote cycling for all abilities and ages

By Harriet Worsley

YOU know, I'm used to hot weather," says Mohamed Tholley with a smile. "So sometimes it's a bit hard for me to get up and train here, but otherwise... it's all good."

Mohamed is used to challenges. Born and raised in Sierra Leone, he had a friend who was a competitive cyclist. He would watch him train and clean his bike after races until the team eventually asked him to join them. He had no money for a bike, but the team saw such potential in him that they stumped up for one.

Mohamed said: "My mum wanted me to go to school, she didn't want me to focus on cycling, but I thought the bike was the best way for me to survive."

He was right. Mohamed became one of his nation's top cyclists but the struggle was not quite over. Sierra Leone is among the poorest countries in the world; 70 per cent of its youth are unemployed or underemployed, while the average income is less than $2 a day. Then there's the deadly Ebola virus disease; between 2013 and 2016 it killed more than 11,000 people across West Africa.

In the summer of 2014, Mohamed was representing his country in the Commonwealth Games in Glasgow, when his roommate became ill.

Fearing it was Ebola, Mohamed left for London where he was forced to start his life afresh.

Here, he was introduced to Keir Apperley, founder, manager and lead coach of Cycling Club Hackney.

"As a teen, growing up in Hackney, I raced up and down the country," says Keir. In fact, he became a first category racing cyclist, competing at a high level. But, he continues: "Compared to football, which felt more mixed and diverse, the world of cycling felt quite closed and elitist."

Black, Asian and Minority Ethnic (BAME) sportspeople make up just two per cent of participants in elite cycling.

When Keir founded Cycling Club Hackney in 2007, the grand total of cycling clubs or qualified cycle sports coaches in the borough was zero.

Today, the club has over 250 members. "We have a much higher rate of participation from BAME and hard-to-reach communities than most clubs," says Keir.

"But there's still work to do. I wanted to create a team that was fully reflective of the society we see around us on these streets."

This team would be inclusive but focus particularly on those that competitive cycling still struggles to embrace, including refugees and asylum seekers. And it would aim high.

"You've got to have goals," says Keir. "I started to think: how great would it be if this team could compete at the top level?"

"Imagine what that would be like for kids on, say, the Kingsmead Estate, if they

What's your alter ego?

Nine incredible acts performed for this year's Alter Ego talent contest

1. Angelina (centre) with her fellow contestants after winning this year's Alter Ego talent showcase; 2. Hackney Young Futures Commission chairs Jermain Jackman and Shekeila Scarlett; 3. EAST London's hottest youth talent contest, Alter Ego, returned with a bang after a year's hiatus.

Singer and songwriter Angelina, 18, was crowned this year's winner in front of a crowd of nearly 1,000 people at Hackney Empire, on 10 May.

Nine acts performed in the final of the talent showcase, hosted by Nush Cope and Yomi Sontan – better known as Yoms – with music by Ice Cream LDN Founder DJ Semo.

The event launched the Council's youth arts festival, Discover Young Hackney, one of the biggest of its kind in the UK.

Angelina wowed the audience singing original music and playing the guitar. She said: "I feel ecstatic about winning, I feel like my dreams are coming true. I hope more people feel inspired to perform – life is too short and you need to dream big and set out to achieve what you want in life."

Second runner up was beat poet Blessing, 17, who said: "I am so happy to see us all prosper and do well. I am proud of everyone who has performed tonight and proud to get out there and demonstrate my message."

In third place were Muniboyz, made up of Augustine, 17, Dennis, 16, and Jalen, 17, who drew large cheers from the audience. Augustine said:

"It's awesome to be one of the winners tonight! Anyone who wants to perform needs to get involved and no matter how hard it gets, keep going."

The voting was made up of a 50/50 combination of audience online votes and judge votes. The judging panel was made up of Sudesh Patel, programme manager at Sky VIP; Aidan Glennon, artist manager; Eboni Lamine, editor in chief at PRDN; Ebi Sampson, publicist at Atlantic Records and Taf Makopa, managing director at Wall Of Comedy.

Alongside performances by some of Hackney's talented young people, the event featured guest appearances from artists Hussain Manawer, Ard Adz, Yung Fume, Belly Squad, Sona Rele and Ms Banks.

Yamin Choudury, Artistic Director at Hackney Empire, said: "Alter Ego has provided an incredible platform for a whole generation of performers from East London over the past eight years.

"There are no words to describe the mixture of pride and joy I experience alongside my team when a young artist, who in many cases didn't know us a month ago, walks off stage having just performed in front of a packed house.

"That's what Alter Ego as a project can do for young people's aspirations.

Alter Ego has created a platform for young, talented East Londoners for the past eight years

DID YOU KNOW?

These young people are a family now, and it's great to see it continuing to benefit even more young people, showcasing some of the best talent on offer in Hackney."

All of the Alter Ego contestants took part in an artist development programme, which included working with industry professionals and mentoring from previous Alter Ego finalists.

The winners will now receive prizes that include photo and video shoots, meetings with record labels and their chance to perform in front of executives at an exclusive event this summer.

The Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, who launched Discover Young Hackney at the event, said: "Yet again I was blown away by the talent of young people in Hackney. Everyone who performed should be feeling really proud of themselves for bringing such an amazing show to Hackney Empire's iconic stage."

"Alter Ego and the rest of the Discover Young Hackney festival is about celebrating and unlocking the talent of Hackney's young people, giving them the tools, skills and professional support to help them embark on careers in the arts and creative industries here in Hackney. I would encourage all young people to get involved with Discover Young Hackney."

Cakes and bakes

Intergenerational Windrush baking sessions saw traditional Caribbean baking recipes revived

By Sheerie Barker

YOUNG and old were brought together over sweet treats such as Jamaican plantain tarts and Grenadian black cake at Hackney's first intergenerational Windrush baking sessions.

The baking events, which took place at the Made in Hackney kitchen on 4 May and the newly opened Gascoyne 2 Community Hall on 11 May, were championed by The Great British Bake Off's 2017 contestant Liam Charles.

They formed part of the Council's Windrush Generations Festival programme of events to celebrate the contributions of first-generation Windrush and their descendants.

Liam, 21, said: "My own culture has impacted the way I cook so I find events like this so important."

I believe it's a great thing to learn how to bake traditional recipes from our heritage because I can pass them down

Liam learnt a lot about baking at the event, pairing up with elder Elon Charles, 78, from Grenada, who showed him how to make a Caribbean black cake.

Liam said: "He took the lead, it was nice for someone to just teach me, and now I know how to make black cake. It taught me some different techniques too."

Bakers worked their way through the kitchen while ska, reggae and calypso tunes played in the background. From the youngest, aged eight, to the oldest, aged 91, with their families and friends in support, laughter and conversation delivered a homely atmosphere.

While the delicious treats baked in the oven, filling the space with aromas from the islands, the participants joined in the conversation to share memories and stories from the Caribbean to England,

Elsie Chaplin, 91, who brought along her Barbadian sweetbread recipe printed on a tea towel, said: "My recipe is from Barbados. Back home, you learn how to bake by watching others."

Dean Barker, 32, added: "I believe it's a great thing to learn how to bake traditional recipes from our heritage because I can pass them down to my daughter when she grows up."

The idea for an intergenerational project came from attendees at the Caribbean Elders Tea Party held last year in Hackney Town Hall, who wanted a way to pass on their skills and knowledge to their descendants.

Rihanna Ali-Balogun, 15, said: "I helped make Jamaican coconut drops. I've really enjoyed myself, I like to bake at home."

Cllr Carole Williams, Cabinet Member for Employment, Skills and Human Resources, said: "This project wasn't just about baking. It was about remembering a generation of pioneers whose lives traversed the globe.

"The tastes, the smells and stories I heard throughout the course of the two-day project reminded me of the Caribbean's rich history and one bite of the duckanoo transported me back to my childhood.

"These are memories that will live with me."

Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, added: "We want to celebrate and salute the Windrush generation in Hackney. In the weeks to come, we are going to have a series of fantastic events.

"It's great this year we are also able to help young people work together with their elders to learn more about their life and contributions to the community and culture of Hackney."

The recipes will be made into a cookbook, which will be launched at the Windrush Tea Party on National Windrush Day, on 22 June.

H Hackney

Hackney is one of the most diverse places in the UK. In this regular feature, we profile the borough's great & good or just plain interesting

By Harriet Worsley

THERE isn't a person alive who doesn't love the smell of baked food coming out of the oven," says Ben Mackinnon. As founder of artisan bakery, E5 Bakehouse, he could now spend all day breathing in the steady stream of loaves that come out of its ovens. Based under the arches, just off London Fields, the bakery, cafe and mill even has a bread named after the borough: the Hackney Wild loaf.

But, says Ben, he wasn't always destined to be a baker. In fact, growing up in Suffolk, he says: "I had absolutely no idea what I wanted to do. I loved fishing, and my father, an entrepreneur, recommended fish farming. So I went off to study it at the Scottish Agricultural College."

Visits to fish farms failed to excite the young Ben and, after a trip to Canada where he learnt about the environmental effects of intensive fish farming, he decided to change tack. He switched courses and studied conservation biology instead.

"After uni, I was striving for adventure," says Ben. "I got a job on a boat, 200 miles off the coast of Newfoundland, and spent three months working for the EU, logging the fish that were caught and also what was discarded."

There followed a stint running the programme, but, Ben says: "Sitting at a desk wasn't for me, so I left, then spent some time working on organic farms in France and the UK, went back to studying energy and the environment for a bit, then got a job in the City as a sustainability consultant in a big engineering firm."

But after two years, Ben got itchy feet once again and set off on another adventure. All Ben's big ideas seem to have been generated by travel, and this was no exception. In Andalusia, Spain, he happened upon some flour and yeast and baked himself a loaf of bread. Soon, he found himself in a bakery in Fez, Morocco, watching a man load a wood fired oven with small flat breads. An idea began to rise in his mind.

Back in the UK, he took an artisan baking course and found a wood fired pizza restaurant in Clapton whose owner agreed to lend him the oven during periods they did not need it.

Ben says: "Every week, I'd take the dough to the restaurant to bake. I knocked on maybe 100 or 200 doors, offering tasters till 20 or so people agreed to give my delivery service a try."

He sold at local markets and offered it to pubs in the evenings, but, he says: "I still had another job, three days a week, in order to keep a roof over my head."

Then he had a lucky break. A chance encounter with Lisa Stockton of Happy Kitchen, in London Fields, led to her agreeing to let Ben build an oven on their premises. For the next three months, he carted clay, bricks and paving slabs through her bakery until a wood fired oven was built.

"For the first year, we sold out of the corridor," he says. "We started making sandwiches, and a neighbour gave us a coffee machine on the proviso that we made him a cup every day. There were four carpenters on the road, and I had to charm them for offcuts to fuel the oven. When that ran out we drove around looking for discarded pallets on the street."

The effort, however, began to pay off. Ben says: "Serious chefs came in keen to support local, grassroots businesses. It's thanks to them, and the people we work with, that we're still here and thriving."

Today, the Bakehouse employs around 100 people. They have expanded into two further arches, and invested in their own milling equipment so that they can buy wheat directly from farmers, commissioning them to grow interesting, tasty alternatives to the genetically narrow range of wheat that typically goes into modern breads.

The Bakehouse sources its ingredients from organic certified and local producers, including its own market garden.

In September 2017, Ben opened the E5 Roasthouse in Tower Hamlets, collaborating with the Refugee Council to provide employment and training for refugees. Thirty per cent of its profits also go to refugee organisations.

"The growth has been a little overwhelming," he says. "I wanted to get it to a place where the company could more or less operate without me, and now it pretty much can."

That doesn't mean, however, that he finally has time to sleep.

Ben has started a new project in Suffolk based on an innovative new model called agroforestry, in which trees are grown among crops to release much-needed carbon into the soil.

"One of our aims is to build links between urban and agricultural worlds," he says. "So if anyone from Hackney wants to volunteer, we'd be really interested. You don't need any experience, just at least three days spare, a willingness to camp and the enthusiasm to get stuck in and explore new ideas."

Feel Good Festival

1 Jun, Geffrye Museum, 136 Kingsland Road, E2 8EA

WHAT makes you feel good? Is it sunshine? Good food? Maybe a little massage? If you answered yes to any, or indeed all of the above, we have great news. The Feel Good Festival is coming to the Geffrye Museum and is entirely dedicated to eating, moving and relaxing.

The museum's gardens will be awash with Turkish, Cypriot and Vietnamese food. There will be Tai Chi and yoga, origami and Turkish marbling, workshops teaching you how to make planters for Cypriot succulents, outdoor games, deckchairs and, yes, foot massages.

► For more info, visit: www.geffrye-museum.org.uk

The totally free festival is the first of four Takeover Days in which communities within Hackney are being handed the keys to the renowned museum gardens and invited to stage events. This time, Centre 151, Derman, Hackney Cypriot Association and Lien Viet Housing Association have taken the lead.

We challenge you to feel anything but sunny (and decidedly full) after an afternoon at this one.

Feel Good Festival will be held on 1 June from 10.30am to 4pm at the Geffrye Museum.

Parents and carers to be consulted on services provided in the borough

Share your views on children's centres

There are 21 children's centres across the borough offering a range of services for expectant parents and families with young children

RESENTERS are being urged to share their experiences of Hackney's children's centres and how they could be improved in the future.

The Council wants to hear from parents and carers who have used, currently use or may use children's centres in the future, to find out about the services they value most and ideas for how to make them better.

There are 21 children's centres across the borough, offering a wide range of services for expectant parents and families with young children, including early education and child care, 'stay and play' activities, parenting support, child and family health services, advice and training, ESOL (English for speakers of other languages) and employment support.

Many of the centres were developed under the national Sure Start Children's Centre programme in 2007, when outcomes for young children in Hackney were well below the London and national averages, and unemployment was high.

The most recent figures show a steady increase in the percentage of children achieving a good level of development at five years old, rising from 57 per cent in 2013 to 77 per cent in 2018.

Responses will also feed into an ongoing piece of work to help make efficiency savings. Despite the Council's Government grant being cut by nearly half, to date the Council has protected children's centres by finding savings elsewhere. However, with few options left, savings must be found from this budget too.

Cllr Chris Kennedy, Cabinet Member for Families, Early Years and Play, said: "We really value our fantastic children's centres – and we know residents do too. In the 12 years since our first children's centres opened, they've achieved some

"This feedback will help us shape the future of Hackney's children's centres, to make sure they reflect local need" great results, developing into hubs for everything a young family could need. They've made a real difference to children's development, particularly those from less well off backgrounds.

"Now they're into their second decade of operation, we want to ask residents what they think of the services our children's centres provide, and how we can make them even better.

"Over the next couple of months we will be speaking to parents and carers who have used, currently use or may use children's centres in the future.

"This feedback will help us to shape the future of Hackney's children's centres, to make sure they reflect local need and continue to support our children and families. It will also feed into an ongoing piece of work to make savings, so we want to make sure we understand what matters most to those who use our children's centres.

"We're going to be visiting lots of events and fun days over the next couple of months, so look out for us, or have your say by completing the questionnaire online."

News in brief

Making art to make amends

YOUNG people working on a making amends project have created a fine art installation with the help of artist Alexandra McKenzie. The artwork, titled 'Meadow', has been created by young people on reparation orders, which are non-custodial sentences to help prevent further offending and help generate an understanding of the effects of crime. Through the project young people have learnt skills that could help with careers in the creative industries. Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: "The artwork created is extremely powerful, and I would recommend all residents to visit the piece and reflect on the voices and experiences of young people that come through. "This art reparations project is part of our prevention led way of tackling youth crime in the borough, and is part of a range of diversion programmes that we offer." 'Meadow: A meditation on Wild Things and Wild Places' is on the third floor gallery at Hackney Picturehouse, Mare Street, E8, until 30 May.

Volunteer for sports events

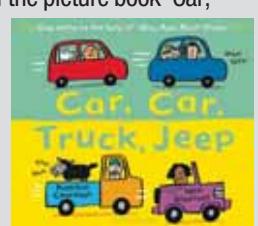

THE Council's Young Hackney team is looking for volunteers to help run sports events for Hackney primary schools organised by Young Hackney Sports Unit. These one-off events are a great opportunity for volunteers who can only commit for a single day. Light physical activity and volunteering outdoors is required. The events will take place on 7 June, 21 June and 3 July, from 10am to 3pm. To find out more and register your interest, email:

xanthippi.karkantou@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 3962.

Time to pump up the jammies

LIBRARIES in the borough will be hosting a week-long event to encourage parents to read to their children. Pyjamarama Week, which will run from 3 to 9 June, is all about celebrating bedtime stories and sharing books and rhymes. The week is organised by BookTrust, the UK's largest children's reading charity, which will be giving out free copies of the picture book 'Car, Car, Truck, Jeep' by Katrina Charman and Nick Sharratt (pictured) across the UK at Pyjamarama-themed events. News in brief

Reuse, repair and learn at Hackney's first Zero Waste Hub

CLISSOLD Park will next month play host to Hackney's first ever Zero Waste Hub, a free community pop-up for residents to reuse, repair and learn new skills.

People will be able to get electrical items fixed, bring in unwanted household items, take others, learn how to repair clothes and buy a bike or get theirs fixed.

The Council is co-hosting the event with local groups, including Hackney Fixers, Forest Recycling Project, TRAID and Peddle My Wheels.

Cllr Jon Burke, Cabinet Member for Energy, Waste, Transport and Public Realm, said: "Alongside eliminating excess consumption altogether, growing the circular economy is crucial to addressing the significant and increasing worldwide problem of resource depletion, including deforestation, harmful mining, and the consumption of fossil fuels that cause global heating. "By keeping products and materials in use, we can contribute to the regeneration of the natural systems on which we depend and re-orientate our economic system to deliver permanence and prosperity for all."

"Our new Zero Waste Hubs will provide residents with the opportunity to participate in the circular economy by taking home household goods that would otherwise be thrown away, swapping, and learning how to fix their broken items, bringing to an end the take-make-waste linear economy that is so harmful to the world we share."

The Zero Waste Hub takes place from 11am to 3pm on 8 June at Clissold Park. For more information, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/zero-waste-hubs

TfL sets out proposals for major new cycleway in East London

HACKNEY and the Isle of Dogs could be connected by a 7.5km cycleway, with new trees, public spaces and pedestrian crossings according to plans put forward by Transport for London (TfL).

The proposed cycleway is the first new cycling route to emerge from TfL's latest analysis, which used data to identify the 25 areas with the best potential to increase cycling numbers.

The route would include 5.6km of segregated cycle lanes, while Victoria Park would be among the neighbourhoods to receive improved public spaces, new trees and pedestrian crossings designed to make walking easier and safer.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: "This proposed cycle route linking Hackney to Mile End and Canary Wharf would mean more people can start to cycle for all or part of their journey. I'd urge people to have their say on the proposals."

London's Walking and Cycling Commissioner, Will Norman, added:

"These exciting plans not only include a new high-quality cycle route connecting the busy streets of Hackney and the Isle of Dogs, but also a raft of improvements that will make the local area cleaner, safer, and more welcoming to get around on foot."

Dancing kings and queens

THIS week Hackney Archives is looking at one of the borough's own dancing queens, Ivy Travers.

For over 30 years, the Ivy Travers Dance School in Clapton trained thousands of young people – including TV and stage actress Sharon D Clarke – a stalwart of Hackney Empire's annual pantos.

The daughter of music hall performers Nat Travers and Katie Weston, Ivy opened her school in the 1950s and staged shows at various venues around East London including York Hall, Shoreditch Town Hall, Central Hall and St Michael's Church.

Were you a student of Ivy Travers? Did you catch any of her students' performances or perhaps you remember the school's floats at local carnivals?

Hackney Archives, based in Dalston, is carrying out a two-year project to digitise images from Gibson's studio so that they can be shared with local people at events around the borough and online.

A key part of the project involves interviewing people who appear in the photographs so that their stories can be preserved as part of the history of Hackney.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2018. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville was directly elected by the borough in 2018. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, email: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 2212. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney, who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Clare Potter.

A healthy eating programme from Shoreditch Trust

www.shoreditchtrust.org.uk

SHOREDITCH Trust's Food For Life Programme works with members of the community to encourage affordable healthy eating, cooking skills and food knowledge. These burgers are a healthy, affordable non-meat option. Black beans are a great source of protein which will make you feel fuller for longer and, like beetroot, they are also an excellent source of fibre. Fibre aids digestion and can help to prevent constipation. The black beans could be swapped for another bean of your choice for example aduki beans or kidney beans. Carrot can also be used in place of the beetroot.

Have your say in the Hackney Young Futures Commission

HACKNEY Young Futures Commission is talking to young people between the ages of 10 and 25 years old to find out how they view Hackney as a place to live, the changes they would like to see and how they would be like to be involved in the decisions that affect their lives.

Participating in this consultation will help the Council to understand what services young people use in Hackney – such as youth and play provision, education, housing, health services – and how they can be changed or improved to make the borough a great place for all its young people to live, study and work in.

Shekeila Scarlett, co-chair of the commission, said: "We still need to hear from all young people in Hackney. Even if it's filling in the survey online, joining the commission itself or coming along to one of our events, then get in touch."

"A movement has started for young people in Hackney to work together to make positive changes, for and within our communities, so get in touch and get involved."

To have your say by 30 August, visit: consultation.hackney.gov.uk. For more information about the commission, email: info@hackneyyoungfutures.co.uk; or contact via Facebook, Instagram and Twitter @HacYoungFutures

LONDON BOROUGH OF HACKNEY

REPORTS OF THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT & SOCIAL CARE OMBUDSMAN

The Local Government Ombudsman has issued two reports following its investigation of two complaints against the London Borough of Hackney. The complaints were about Education & Children's Services matters.

The Ombudsman found that there had been fault on the part of the Council, and this had caused injustice to the complainants.

The Council must now consider the reports and tell the Ombudsman within three months (or such longer period as the Ombudsman may agree) what it proposes to do.

Copies of the reports will be available for public inspection during normal office hours at Hackney Town Hall, Mare Street, London E8 1EA and at Hackney Service Centre, 1 Hillman Street, London E8 1DY for three weeks starting on 27 May 2019. Anyone is entitled to take copies of the report or extracts from it. Copies will be supplied free of charge.
